

MESH Launch New Range of PC's

Contributed by CB Team
Wednesday, 20 February 2008
Last Updated Wednesday, 20 February 2008

A new range of MESH PC's has been launched, showcasing the latest AMD technology. The systems are based around the brand new AMD triple and quad core technology which has given users an alternative to the Intel Core 2 Duo range.

Dario Rebaudengo, UK Sales Manager for MESH Computers said "the price/performance of these systems will give our customers a real choice when it comes to making a new PC purchase. These systems represent enormous value for money. AMD has priced these CPU's at a point where customers are able to choose high performance multi core CPU's at price points previously unheard of"

These systems are branded under the Matrix xXx brand and also showcase the new ATI graphics technology.

Dario Rebaudengo went on to say that "We are also pleased to be launching the new HD 3 series of ATI graphics cards which will make their first appearance in the new Matrix xXx series"

MESH